Raid max ant bait reviews

©2020 Walmart Stores, Inc. Top critical ratingAll critical reviews> milady_winter2.0 of the 5 starDeen nothing at all. Reviewed in the United States on March 14, 2017Deed absolutely nothing to the kitchen ant problem, unlike Terro-PCO, which killed them off within a week. It uses a combination of products to help you work smarter, not harder, when fighting bugs in your home. Check out the full system below Raid Max® Double Control Ant Bait has two types of bait to attract and kill ants. After ants feed on the bait, they return to the colony and hand over the bait to the queen and the others, killing the entire colony. Population reduction can be expected within days, with the bait working for up to three months. Raid Max® Double Control Ant Baits are child-proof. Available in 4 count and 8 count. • Only use indoors. • Unseeded bait for placement. • For a thorough ant check, use all baits at once. • Place bait where you have seen ants, including in corners, under sinks, in cupboards and near sanitary fixtures. • To prevent ants from returning, replace all bait every three months. • Contains peanuts or peanut by-products. • Wash thoroughly with soap and water after handling. • In the eyes: Keep the eye open and rinse slowly and gently with water for 15-20 minutes. Remove contact lenses, if any, after the first five minutes, then continue to rinse eye. • IF on the skin or clothing: Take out contaminated clothing. Rinse the skin immediately with plenty of water for 15-20 minutes. • Take the product container or label with you when you call a poison control center or doctor or go for treatment. If empty: Do not use the bait station. Place in the trash or bid for recycling if available. If partially stocked: Call your local solid waste agency or 1-800-529-3394 for disposal instructions. Never place unused product in a drain. Our editors independently research, test and recommend the best products; more information about our review process can be found here. Although ants are probably not the most panic-inducing household pests, they are certainly one of the most persistent – and, in many cases, the most numerous. If you're battling an ant problem, there are a series of ant killers that can help you claim victory. Some ant killers, such as spray pesticides, offer instant gratification; they can kill insects on contact, but do not necessarily provide long-lasting effects. Others, such as ant bait, gels, and some types of grains require a little more patience as ants have to bring enough of the venom back to the colony for you to see results. Of course, it's also Note that almost every ant killer will pose a risk if swallowed, so make sure all pesticides are kept away from pets and small children. If you're worried small fingers or paws will find these products, or you just want a greener option, there are also eco-friendly options on the market that are safer to use in busy family family Below, the best ant killers out there. When you want a no-fail way to get rid of annoying household ants, reviewers say TERRO T300 Liquid Ant Baits are their go-to solution. Made with Borax and other ingredients, they are pre-filled and easy to use: You just cut the top of each bait with scissors and place it in a place where you've seen many ants. The bait comes in packs of six, and should be kept away from pets or small children. It is important to note that while ant baits are generally very effective, they need time to interfere with an ant's digestive system; Users can even initially see more ants before enough of the bait makes its way back to the colony. The manufacturer says the process can take up to two weeks, and it's important to make sure they have nothing else to feast on, too. The vast majority of reviewers say that this bait drastically reduced or eliminated their ant problem, and they love that there is no smell or mess to deal with. Some say their ants ignored the bait, however, while a few others say the bait continued to attract ants, but never really stopped the attack. After setting this ant bait in our kitchen and bathroom, we noticed an almost immediate increase in ant activity. Don't worry, that's what's supposed to happen. We saw most visitors in the first few days, and then a steady stream continued for over a week, eventually trickling into number until no ants were visible by two weeks. —Sarah Vanbuskirk, Product Tester If you'd rather try to kill ants outside before using pesticides in the home, consider giving TERRO Outdoor Liquid Ant Baits a chance. Like their indoor counterparts, these outdoor baits use Borax as the active ingredient and come pre-filled and ready for use. They should also be kept away from pets and small children. TERRO Outdoor baits come with small stakes that allow users to secure them into the ground where they have observed ants, preferably close to where they are entering a home. The bait is also weatherproof, so you don't have to worry about rain, wind or other interference. Like other slow-kill methods, these baits offer no immediate relief. It can take up to a few weeks for most ants to die. As with all baits, a minority of reviewers say they don't work for their specific ants, and some also complain that the bait containers are thin. In the past we have just used the incursions, which work well in the short term but do not offer long-lasting ant lighting. However, when used in conjunction with the TERRO Outdoor Liquid Ant Baits, we noticed a significant absence of ants. -Sarah Vanbuskirk, Tester If you have a wide problem or you're just not sure where your ants come from, spreading some grains like Amdro Ant Block Home Perimeter Ant Bait Granules around your home can help to keep the problem under control. The active ingredient is hydramethylinon, a chemical pesticide that should not be used around children, pets, livestock, livestock, gardens where food is grown. The grains kill 15 different ant species, including carpenter and fire ants. Amdro Ant Block can easily be spread directly from the container, although the grains should not be used on wet ground, if there is rain in the forecast, or if it is outside below 50 degrees. A 24-ounce container can cover about 1,080 linear feet. Since the grains are bait, it can take up to two weeks for Amdro to kill the majority of an ant colony. Reviewers love the simple application and lack of smell or residue, but some say ants ignored the grains. In my experience, after a day or two, I noticed a drastic drop in the ants in the house, a break that I still enjoy two months after treatment. A few weeks later, I started to see one or two ants, suggesting that the entire colony hasn't collapsed yet, but the frequency has decreased significantly. —Sarah Vanbuskirk, Product Tester Ant bait can be an effective solution against ants long term, but they require some patience. If you don't have one, or just want the satisfaction of killing ants in contact, it's hard to go wrong with a classic can of Raid Ant & Roach Killer. The active ingredients are imiprothrin and cypermethrin, two common chemical pesticides. Raid recommends spraying away people, pets, food and food; wash hands after use; and of course, to ensure that the product is not ingested. Raid is super-easy to use: Shake the can, keep it upright, and spray it about 18 inches from the surface where you've seen insects. It kills on contact, and the remaining effects can kill bugs as long as four weeks after spraying, Raid says. Users agree that this spray does a great job of instantly killing bugs, and they want the smell to fade minimally and quickly. However, some grouse claims that the lingering effects are minimal, and nowhere near the four-week Raid, so it may not be the best long-term solution. If you have a severe ant infestation, it might be time to spend a little more money on a professional-grade solution like Advion Ant Gel. This insecticide is effective on almost all types of ants and the active ingredient is Indoxacarb, a chemical pesticide developed by DuPont. Like most pesticides, it should be kept away from children and pets who may try to take it, and users should avoid contact with the skin, eyes or clothing. The gel comes preloaded in an applicator tube, and reviewers say most users don't need to use the whole tube because the gel is pretty strong. As with the TERRO bait, Advion gel should be applied near an ant trails and will not work immediately - ants Time needed to swarm the gel and take it back to the colony. Reviewers like that it's easy to squeeze in cracks where ants come into a house, and they say it won't drip when applied vertically. They also say there's a minimal smell. However some say it simply didn't attract their ants, or it attracted more ants but didn't kill them. Whether you are a crawling baby or a curious dog, in some households, households, toxic insecticides are a no-go. In those cases, a more environmentally friendly solution like Orange Guard Home Pest Control is a must. This is a water-based spray that uses orange peel extract to repel insects, including ants, and it is safe to use around food, children and pets. It's easy to use Orange Guard: just spray it on surfaces where you've seen ants. Insects are killed on contact and can stay away for up to several weeks (although reviewers are divided on how long - some say they should be reapplied every few days). Many users love the citrus scent, but some say they feel it is too strong. Some also warn that it may leave a slightly sticky residue, and while it is easy enough to wipe on, it can reduce its effectiveness against insects. If you have a fire ant colony in your garden, it's not just a nuisance, it's potentially dangerous. To get rid of it, the best option is to go to the source-the hill itself. This granulated ant killer is placed directly on the hill, making the hill itself uninhabitable and killing the ants inside. To really get rid of your fire ant problem, sprinkle the grains on and around the hill, then lightly miss the area with water. It is important not to disturb the colony if you do this to avoid being bitten or escaping with a few ants. Within 15 minutes, the colony, including the queen, will be dead. Final verdict To get rid of house ants, we recommend TERRO Liquid Ant Baits. It's a budget-friendly solution that works quickly and has an unobtrusive design. However, if you are looking for a product to target ant colonies outside, go with the TERRO Outdoor Liquid Ant Baits. What to look for in an Ant Killer Type Different types of ants are attracted by different things - namely sugar or fat. To determine what kind of ants you have and what kind of ant killer you need, place both items in a room and see where the ants are going. If they are attracted to the sweet stuff, choose an ant killer suitable for sugar ants; If the ants are attracted to dirt, choose one suitable for fat ants. Inside versus outside Many ant killers can be used both indoors and outdoors. Always check the label, though - some stronger ant killers may be too powerful for indoor use while some household products may not keep out the elements. Safety If you have pets or young children, opt for ant traps because they are more contained than sprays and grains. Grains.
